We are continuing our practice of multiplying decimals and using our knowledge to create menus and shopping for the necessary items with a $100.00 budget. Some of the choices are very funny and not the healthiest. We will finish up next week with dividing decimals and applying those skills to some fun comic book math. Next Quarter: beginning geometry with classifying polygons.	Students demonstrated their knowledge of economics through an informal assessment. Students read a passage on the various forms of economy and how trade affects our economy. Students then answered questions to show their understanding of the U.S. economy.	Congratulations to all my students for sharing their knowledge of ecosystems with peers and parents in such a fun way! The games were amazing and very engaging and I think parents learned so much about our science unit! Thank you all for your encouragement and taking the time from your busy day to "play". This next quarter we will be studying weather and weather patterns across the globe.	In Reading, students finished reading their book club books and discussing their interpretations. Students completed an end of unit post-assessment demonstrating their knowledge of interpreting texts. Book Clubs met with me for one final discussion to reflect on their books. In Writing, students finalized their narrative writing pieces. Students used the Narrative Writing Checklist to evaluate their writing. Students shared their narratives with their class.
